

There is too much low-quality software being sold for a higher price than what it's worth.

Many products online are locked behind a paywall, such as news articles or games. Sometimes people need to find information on a topic fast, and they cannot access certain information because they have not paid for the service. Lately there has been a trend of video games that are subpar in quality, whether that be performance-wise or gameplay-wise, that cost up to $70, and even recently $80. Paying high prices is frustrating for user everywhere.